

The New York Times

WEEKEND ROUNDUP

5 Things to Do This Weekend

Our critics and writers have selected noteworthy cultural events to experience virtually and in person in New York City.

Sept. 16, 2021

ART & MUSEUMS

The Garden of Many Delights

An installation view of David Benjamin Sherry's photographs at Wave Hill, which has several exhibitions on view this fall. David Benjamin Sherry and Wave Hill; Stefan Hagen

Wave Hill is not only a remarkably unique public garden in the Riverdale section of the Bronx, it also has a nearly 50-year history of mounting captivating art shows.

Wave Hill's offerings this fall are no exception. In its Glyndor Gallery through Dec. 5, it is displaying "Now," the first half of "Eco-Urgency: Now or Never." This two-part exhibition explores our ecological crisis through works by 15 multidisciplinary artists (the Lehman College Art Gallery will host the second half, "Or Never," starting on Dec. 4). Additionally, two solo shows by Wave Hill's fellows, Katherine Miranda and Jake Brush, are on view until Oct. 10 in the gallery's Sunroom Project Space; and in the Wave Hill House, also through Dec. 5, David Benjamin Sherry's photographs of the American West remind us why nature is worth preserving.

On Saturday at 11 a.m., there will be an hourlong tour of the Glyndor Gallery. And "Eco-Urgency" will serve as inspiration for an outdoor concert by the String Orchestra of Brooklyn on Sunday at 5:30 p.m. All exhibitions and events are free with admission to the garden.

MELISSA SMITH